

Be the Leader Others Want to Follow

“You don’t have to hold a position in order to be a leader.”
— Henry Ford

Never before in history have outstanding leaders been in greater demand than they are today. In a climate that is increasingly laced with fears of the COVID-19 pandemic and uncertainty about the future, leadership matters most. We need leaders, at every level, now more than ever who have the courage to be trustworthy, approachable, encouraging, and tuned in to their team—both face-to-face and in a virtual environment. This training will equip participants with tools to help their team members thrive in difficult times.

The following learning objectives will be covered:

- 1. Learn how to adapt your leadership style to others’ current developmental level—know when to direct and when to delegate tasks
- 2. Identify the key intrinsic drivers that motivate individuals and teams
- 3. Understand how to communicate clearly and effectively
- 4. Discuss five factors for building trust and influence with your team
